ERWIN IS EXONERATED

TESTIMONY BEFORE COMMISSION-ER HEACOCK BY D. S. RICHARD-SON SHOWS HIM INNOCENT.

SAN FRANCISCO, October 23.—Before United States Commissioner Heacock yesterday morning Daniel S.
Richardson, general superintendent of the San Francisco Postoffice, testified that he went to Washington in the interests of the device of the Montague Time Indicator Company, and that apon the request of August W. Machen and George W. Beavers he gave them large blocks of stock in the company in consideration of which they secured $20,000 worth of contracts for the device from the department of the Postoffice, in which they were high officials. He practically assumed the entire responsibility for the bribery himself.

The resolution by which the directors of the local company issued the stock to Machen and Beavers; under other names, of course, than their own, was placed in evidence. The document bore the letters "O. K.—W.
W. M." and Richardson testified that the "W. W. M." stood for W. W.
Montague, Postmaster of San Francisco, then president of the device company.

After Machen and Beavers had given the order for a large number of the postal box devices, at $4 each, Richardson succeeded in getting the price raised to $4.25 and $4.50 each, and a letter written upon the subject by Richardson to Machen was introduced in evidence, which says, referring to the additional sum required to meet the increased bill: "I have laid the matter as frankly before you as I have before you, and I am assured by him that the money will be provided."

The whole testimony of D. S. Richardson, understood to be practically the same as the testimony which he gave before the Federal Grand Jury at Washington, was a series of revelations even to those outsiders who have followed the case most closely, and the bringing of the names of Postmaster Montague and former Congressman Loud actively into the scandal were but two of several surprises.
Instead of involving James W. Erwin, the former Postoffice Inspector, now under indictment and in the interest of whose removal to Washington the present proceedings are had, the testimony of the government's chief witness, Richardson, showed his connection with the whole affair to be remote and his participation such as might have occurred without any criminal intent and without any knowledge on his part at the time that bribery and other illegal practices were going on.

The case before the Commissioner was reopened upon motion of the Government, it being said that District Attorney Woodworth feared that the Commissioner might not hold the indictment as sufficient grounds for ordering Erwin's removal to Washington for trial in the face of evidence already offered in Erwin's behalf. If, by putting on the witnesses here who appeared before the Washington Grand Jury, the Government sought to strengthen its case, it is difficult to see where it has succeeded. It is equally difficult to see how Richardson could hope to escape indictment upon his own testimony except upon the assumption that he has been promised immunity in order to get him to turn state's evidence.

In reply to questions by District Attorney Woodworth, who took the stand at ten o'clock, D. S. Richardson said that he had been in the local Postoffice service for twenty years. He was the originator of the main idea of the postal device and formed the Montague Time Indicator Company for the purpose of putting it on the market, using the name of Postmaster Montague, who was given half of the 20,000 shares of stock and became president.
A fourth of the stock went to Hoagland, a mechanic who developed the invention, and Richardson retained the balance. J. W. Erwin became a stockholder in August 1899, when he was given fifty shares for services performed in perfecting the invention.
Late in 1899 the board of directors of the Montague Time Indicator Company paid the expenses of Richardson and Erwin to go to Washington to bring the device to the attention of Postoffice officials to see if contracts could not be secured. Erwin was asked to go because of his acquaintance in Washington. Richardson could not take any conversation with Erwin about distributing stock at Washington. Erwin introduced Richardson to Machen, Richardson being already acquainted with Beavers. Richardson had several interviews with Machen and Beavers in restaurants, at some of which Erwin was present.

"Did you have any conversation with Machen and Beavers about giving them stock in order to secure their influence in getting contracts?" asked Woodworth.

"Beavers first suggested to me that it would be a good thing to give them stock in the company. I offered to give him 2000 shares and he said he would accept. I told Machen how we had organized out here and wanted to do business. I gave him to understand that we could have a portion of the stock—1000 shares."

"What did Machen do?"

"He accepted."

"Beavers said the organization of the company in the name of Montague suggested an impropriety and advised that the name of the company be changed. It was thus that we came to reorganize the company as the Postal Device and Development Company upon my return home."

"Did Machen or Beavers say that their stock must be issued to them in names other than their own?"

"Yes; Machen gave me the name of Selgar, a man who I had met, and 1000 shares were issued to him in Selgar's name. Beavers gave me the name of McDonald and 2000 shares were issued to him in that name. I did not agree to give stock to anybody else at Washington."

Richardson said that he had no conversation with Erwin about giving stock to anybody. The report filed with the directors upon Richardson's return, and signed also by Erwin, which was put in evidence, said that Richardson had been given to understand that the company would receive a contract for $3556 for 2000 devices at $4 each—2000 being the total number of boxes then in use in California, each of which was to be equipped with a device. The report adds: "The value of this is much greater when we consider that this action means in the way of further profits."

Richardson said that his first agreement was merely verbal and that subsequent orders were merely letters from Machen's department; that no bids were ever asked or any advertising done, and that no one ever suggested that the matter of the devices was an urgency matter, which alone justified ordering supplies without first advertising for bids. This violation is one of the counts in the last indictment of Machen.

In December, 1899, the directors of the device company passed a resolution giving several thousand shares of stock to Richardson, Hoagland, Erwin and H. P. Thrall. Richardson identified the record when it was handed to him and said that the stock for Machen and Beavers was to come out of that specified in the resolution as going to himself and Hoagland.
Woodworth pointed to the letters "O. K.—W. W. M." on the paper, and asked: "What do these initials stand for?"

"They stand for Postmaster W. W.
Montague," replied Richardson. "He gave his approval of the issue of stock." As to how much Montague knew of the real recipients of the stock thus conveyed Richardson did not say and was not asked.

Even Commissioner Heacock opened his eyes at this interesting information, and he inquired, "Did Machen and Beavers pay anything for this stock?" and the witness replied: "No sir."

Soon after Machen received his stock a letter which was introduced, came from him increasing the order to 7000 boxes.
Richardson told of visiting Washington again in March, 1900, and asking Machen to allow $4.50 and $5 each for them. Then arose some question as to where the additional money to pay for them was to come from, and after his return home Richardson conferred with Congressman Loud, whose position gave him great influence in the appropriation of money for postoffice affairs, and Richardson wrote the letter found in Machen's papers, which says: "I have laid the matter before Loud as frankly as I have before you, and I am assured by him that the money will be provided." This is hardly consistent with Loud's repeated declarations that he had no knowledge or business with the affairs of the Postal Device and Development Company.

The fact that the Government instead of the company paid the freight and cost of attaching the devices was brought out, making the profit greater.

Erwin's connection was the last thing to be reached. The memorandum was introduced which Richardson gave him when he went to Washington early in 1900. It reminded him to speak to Machen about the time of payment and about a detail of the devices then being manufactured.
Richardson said he asked Erwin as a friend and as a stockholder to attend to the matters. Two or three letters written by Erwin to Machen were introduced in which the business of the device company was referred to, but which did not appear to contain anything sensational. It is said that in indicting Erwin the Grand Jury presumed that the memorandum and these letters indicated that Erwin was party to the conspiracy whose details are divulged by Richardson.
Richardson will be cross-examined by Attorney Knight this afternoon and a decision is expected soon.

RESEARCH CLUB.

At the meeting of the Research Club held last night at the residence of Governor and Mrs. Dole, Ed Towse, J. D.
Avery and G. C. Owens reported the following as a committee appointed for that purpose:

Whereas the members of this organization are deeply impressed with the fact that in the death of the late Judge Morris March Estee they have sustained the loss of an exemplar of that manhood and citizenship which strengthens and adorns the structure of our just and enlightened government.
Resolved that as a tribute to the patriotism and unblemished character of the late Judge Morris March Estee, the Young Men's Research Club secure and display at all its meetings hereafter an American flag to be known as the "Estee Flag."

Resolved that a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to Mrs. Morris M.
Estee at San Francisco.

The resolutions were unanimously adopted by a rising vote.

The address of the evening was to have been made by Mr. Kincaid on the "Macedonian Situation," but was not given. Instead Honorable Henry E.
Highton gave a very interesting talk on "American Citizenship," which was well received.
